How to Unblock Someone on Gmail

By John William - June 27, 2022

When you've changed your mind about it and would like to receive emails from an account that you've blocked it's simple to unblock an individual using Gmail. We'll show you how you can accomplish this on your computer as well as your mobile phone.

Unblock a Gmail Email Address on Desktop Version

To get rid of people from your list of blocked people for your computer, first open a web browser on your computer, and then launch Gmail. Sign into your account.

- In Gmail's top-right corner select "Settings" (a gear icon).
- In the menu with the expanded options In the expanded menu, click "See All Settings."
- In the "Settings" page, in the tabs in the upper right hand corner, select "Filters and Blocked Addresses."
- Scroll until you reach the lowest point. Below, you'll find an overview of all those blocked emails. To unblock someone on this list, right next to their email address click "Unblock."

- Choose “Unblock” in the prompt.

The email address you have chosen is now blocked within the Gmail account. You’ll be able to see future emails being delivered directly to your inbox.

Unblock All Email Addresses in Gmail on Mobile Phone

To remove all restricted users using the iPhone or Android phone, you must first open the Gmail app on your phone.

- In the top-right corner of Gmail click on your profile’s icon, then select “Manage Your Google Account.”
- Scroll down to the screen that appears, and after which you can tap “Protect Your Account.”
- Scroll down to the “Security Checkup”, then click “Gmail Settings.”
- Within the expanding “Gmail Settings” menu, under the “Blocked Email Addresses” header You’ll see all the blocked users.
- To unlock all these people you need to tap the “Unblock All” option.

Gmail will instantly take all blocked users off your account, and you’re done. For more deep details contact our customer support on Assist Me 360.
